

JOIN US ON THE WORLD TOUR YOUR OIL CAN KEEP OUR TRIP GOING

Photojournalist Shusei Yamada has embarked on the Biodiesel Adventure that will take him and two drivers, around the world running on fuel made from (used/old) kitchen cooking oil in the car.

EXPERIMENT

RESEARCH

CONNECTING

The 1 year, 60,000 kilometer
(37500 miles) adventure began

February 2008 in Vancouver, Canada - winding across North America, Africa, Europe, Asia and ending in Japan. We seek to connect with people, communities, culture - experience the enduring beauty of the world, and to test the potential of biofuel as a viable alternative to fossil fuel.

www.Biodieseladventure.com

Contact: Satori Murata, 505.670.8462(NM) satori@cybermesa.com

1

After cooling used cooking oil, put it through an ordinary strainer etc to reduce sediment.

2

Put it in a clear plastic bottle or jar fitted with a tight lid to prevent oxidation.

3

At the collection sites, Shusei may take your photograph to put on the Web.